

Democratizing the Green Deals

Participation and deliberation in the co-design of environmental transition policies

THE EVENT WILL BE HELD IN THE ITALIAN LANGUAGE

THURSDAY 21st DECEMBER 2023 10.00am Piazza Leonardo da Vinci 32, Ed. 2 room 2.2.1

Academic and political discourse over environmental transition – especially within the framework of the so-called “Green Deal” - generally emphasizes the relevance of the active involvement of social and economic actors in the co-design of long-term environmental transition policies. In this perspective, the development of “Green Deals” and “Pacts” has been the testbed to experiment innovative methods to engage societal actors in the co-design of pacts, policies, actions, and strategies at different scales. This meeting aims to compare three different cases of broad participation in the formulation of green pacts, investigating on the one hand the methodologies and tools used to involve and deliberate in participatory settings, and on the other hand exploring the effects of participation both on political decision making, and in the perspective and behavior of the participating individuals and organizations.

ORBIS Dialogues involve scholars, policy makers, activists, and practitioners of democratic innovation in discussing the relation between long-term impacts of democratic innovation experiments - in policy, people, organizations, cultures - and the configuration of their deliberative features.
